BRADLEY SAYS WILLKIE AIDED IN 'CONTACTS'

Gave Him Names Of Officials To See In 'Arranging' For 'Donations,' He Says.

BARES MORE LETTERS

Tells Of Trips From Georgia To N. Y., Through West In Seeking Finances.

(By Associated Press) COLUMBUS—Lee Bradley brought the name of Wendell Willkie, New York utilities executive, into his testimony before the Ohio senate graft-hunting committee today, but did not disclose the nature of a conference he said he attended with Willkie and Gov. Martin L. Davey.

The 57-year-old Cleveland asphalt salesman, who faces a perjury charge filed by Governor Davey because of his previous testimony that he arranged for automobile manufacturers to contribute to Davey's 1934 campaign, presented to the committee scores of letters he said were exchanged between himself and Davey.

Bradley showed a letter he said he had written to Davey, the governor's brother, from Atlanta, Ga., May 1, 1934, concerning a meeting with P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power company.

Favored 'Contribution.'

The letter said Arkwright was more disposed to make a campaign contribution than to give the Davey Tree Expert company a tree-trimming contract, because the Davey company would get the money quicker as a gift but that Arkwright said he would prefer to "get the lowdown from Wendell Willkie first."

Bradley said he suggested to Arkwright that Martin L. Davey see Willkie in New York and approve "anything Arkwright wanted to do."

Bradley said, he, Davey and Willkie conferred in New York and that Bradley himself asked Willkie for introductions to Commonwealth & Southern subsidiary officials.

The witness then said Willkie professed to dislike letters, but gave him names of the executives he wanted to meet.

"So I followed this matter up in the interests of Commonwealth & Southern," Bradley testified.

Committee Attorney James Metzbaum of Cleveland inquired if Bradley meant he was working for Commonwealth & Southern.

"If I had letters from Cities Service, was I representing Cities Service?" retorted Bradley.

He added that he was not paid (Continued on Page 2, Col. 6)

Dancer Whitney's Father Wants Her To Give Him Funds

LOS ANGELES—(AP)—Eleanor Whitney's father, with 72 cents to his name, wants his 20-year-old dancing daughter to help support him.

Allen Whitney, in a suit on file today, charged he is enduring poverty while Eleanor enjoys a film salary of $500 weekly.

With her mother, from whom he was divorced, his daughter resides in a luxurious Hollywood apartment, Whitney said.

Filing an affidavit that he is a legal pauper, the father asked a $25 weekly allowance from Miss Whitney and $200 for clothes and medical attention.

A friend of the dancer at Paramount studio, where she began her screen career in 1935, gave another side to the story.

"Miss Whitney has supported her mother and educated a younger sister, almost since she was 10 years old. She has helped her father many times," said the friend.

Cleveland-born, Miss Whitney was a tap-dancing protégé of Bill (Bojangles) Robinson before she came to Hollywood.

Fire Truck 'Jackknifes' At Corner

20-Year-Old Aerial Wagon 'Cracks Up' on Way to Chimney Fire.

One piece of Mansfield's antiquated fire apparatus came to grief today.

The 20-year-old aerial truck, driven by Weldon W. Latimer, jackknifed on the slippery pavement at West Fifth and North Walnut street at 9:50 a. m. today while firemen were answering a call to a North Adams street fire.

When the huge tractor and trailer doubled up, the frame of the ladder truck ripped into the gas tank under the driver's seat and the fuel supply quickly spilled out. A tool box on the running board was demolished and the steel frame of the apparatus bent.

Damage was estimated by Chief Charles J. Seeburger at $300. Neither Latimer nor Jacob W. Lowman, who was piloting the rear carriage was injured although both admitted they had been shaken up considerably.

Towed To Station.

The giant ladder truck, its fuel gone was towed to the central station house where repairs were started at once. Seeburger said that a trip probably would have to be made to Columbus to obtain a new gasoline tank. Repairs will probably be completed within two days, he said.

The accident happened, the drivers related, when the heavy truck failed to negotiate the turn on the slippery pavement at West Fifth street, and the ladder section of the outfit swung around into the tractor.

Although the apparatus was equipped with chains, they failed to take hold on the wet pavement, due to the lack of braking equipment on the truck, Latimer said.

Lowman stated that it was a "chill," and that a utility pole at the curb did look "rather large," although the truck did not strike it.

More evidence that apparatus now used by the fire department isn't all it should be came to light when a 12-year-old hose truck at the station wasn't able to tow the ladder up the slight grade at the station entrance. Firemen had to get out a later model truck to do the job.

The fire, at the home of Andrew Dent, colored, rear of 215 North Adams street, was extinguished by Company No. 2, which also answered the alarm. A defective chimney, Seeburger reported, caused only slight damage to the one room cottage.

SHANGHAI—(INS)—Killing 1,000 Chinese in a "preliminary battle," Japanese troops today captured the strategic city of Hwaiking, 10 miles north of the ill-starred Yellow river. Japanese headquarters announced today.

The Nipponese were said to have seized the city in a sudden swoop that left corpses of defenders littered around the defense lines.

At the same time, reports reaching here via British Hong Kong said the Japanese had destroyed 150 villages situated along the Peking-Hankow railway in retaliation for the Chinese Guerilla warfare that has delayed the Japanese offensive in the Lungtai and other battle areas.

The "economic stupidity" of the United States and European nations is responsible for most of the ill feeling between the countries of the world and must be corrected if there is to be peace, C. Booth was the third speaker to appear here in an Institute of International Understanding directed by the Mansfield Rotary and University clubs. About 700 heard him speak on "World Economic Co-operation."

Asserting that tariffs and economic policies are international questions and no longer purely domestic, Booth said "We can't

FUGITIVE FOR 5 YEARS HELD

State Sends to New York for O. S. R. Inmate Who Fleed Honor Camp in '33.

A fugitive of the Mansfield reformatory, held by New York authorities will be returned to the institution by parole officers who decided today to "kill two birds with one stone" in bringing two law violators back to Ohio.

United Press dispatches from Columbus said that Charles Haslop, supervisor of parole and investigation for the state welfare department, had dispatched officers to pick up Carl Norton, alias William Baker, 37, a fugitive from the reformatory, on the same trip for a parole violator held at Schenectady, N. Y.

Norton, who escaped from the Grafton honor camp May 29, 1933, was arrested by New York detectives who had been searching for him for six months. He was wanted in the theft of a $300 payroll from a firm which had employed him as a crew manager, dispatches said.

By coincidence, a special agent for the American Express company was in Mansfield today checking with reformatory officials on Norton's record.

Harold C. Keyes, special agent, from the Chicago office of the firm said he had been trailing Norton for several months through the east and middle west as far as Kansas City.

Upon first receipt of the news of Norton's capture, state welfare department officials feared that the lack of funds would not permit them to undertake the extradition.

CHAMBERLAIN SETS BRITAIN ON NEW TRACK

Prime Minister, Voted Backing By Cabinet, Maps 'Bargain' With Fascist Leaders.

SPEEDS PEACE PROGRAM

Seeks Quick Settlement Of Differences With Italy, Colonies For Nazis.

(By Associated Press) LONDON—(P)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain today shouted to an angry opposition in the House of Commons that the League of Nations as protection against aggression was "a delusion" and demanded that Geneva throw off its "shams and pretences."

The coldly practical Chamberlain, with cabinet support in casting aside the idealistic Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, also had a pledge of a majority from parliament before debate began on the new policies this afternoon.

A caucus of his conservative party, with support from 33 national liberals, gave the prime minister 418 votes with which to meet the labor opposition's motion of censure. Labor commanded 159 votes.

Split Not Serious.

Although there were opposition hopes that rough and tumble debate would split the conservative front and force Chamberlain to resign, the motion mainly provided a glorious opportunity for the opposition to review grievances.

There was no more chance of successful opposition, conservatives declared, than when Premier Stanley Baldwin toppled Edward VIII from the throne in December, 1936.

Chamberlain, taking a step away from the league of nations machinery so staunchly supported by Eden, chose the speed of direct negotiations in his program designed:

1. Quickly to settle old differences with Italy, in conversations at Italy's request in Rome.
 2. Then to find an amicable solution to Germany's demands for colonies.
 3. Bring France into what would be a four-power understanding for peace with Britain, Germany and Italy.

Bucharest Denies King Carol Slain By Assassins.

LONDON—(INS)—A rumor reaching here from Rome that King Carol of Rumania had been assassinated caused a brief flurry of excitement today.

The rumor filtered into official sources in the Italian capital and news of it was telephoned here. A few minutes of checking by telephone with Bucharest and other capitals showed that it was without foundation.

Reliable sources in Rome which heard the rumor were at a loss to account for its origin and wide circulation. Direct contact with Bucharest disposed of it as groundless within a short time.

Washington First President—U. S. Decided Officially in '32

George Washington, whose birthday anniversary the nation observes today, has long been known as the "Father of his country" and the first president of the United States, but he wasn't officially the first president until 1932, an Associated Press writer has discovered.

Several presidents of the Continental congress claimed the title of president of the United States, and only six years ago the state department decided officially that under the constitution Washington was the first to hold the office.

Born in Virginia 206 years ago, Washington was a man of the people—an average fellow—despite his wealth. He went to clambakes, drank wine and gambled occasionally, his biographers tell us. He lost several times

NEW WAGE-HOUR BILLS SENT TO LOWER HOUSE

One Draft Adopts NRA Wage Code, Other Sets Up U. S. Scale Authority.

(By International News Service) WASHINGTON—The administration's original wage-hour bill was discarded today in confidential bills distributed to members of the house labor committee by Chairman Mary T. Norton (D) of New Jersey.

The new measures, prepared after a series of conferences between Mrs. Norton, administration officials and members of congress, are designed to effect a compromise in national wage-hour legislation.

One measure adopted the NRA code wages as "standard" minimum wages in an effort to mollify bitter southern opposition which throttled wage-hour legislation in the special session.

Grants Blanket Power

A second confidential measure submitted by Mrs. Norton would grant a federal wage-hour authority virtually blanket power to fix wages in low-paid industries and vaguely retains the 40-cent-an-hour minimum and the 40-hour maximum work week principle of the Black-Connery bill.

The proposals aroused immediate opposition among members of the labor committee and cast further doubt upon enactment of a national wage-hour bill in the present session of congress.

The two measures will be thrust before the committee Thursday in an effort to find a compromise acceptable to congress. The bills provide:

One—Creates a wage-hour administration with authority to name wage-hour boards. Establishes as "standard" wage the wage paid by industry in 1934 (when NRA codes were in effect). Wage-hour board and administration are directed to bring them up to the "standard." Also provides the "standard" can be exceeded.

Two—Second bill sets up wage-hour administration in labor department and provides for appointment of boards to recommend wages for various industries.

Prohibits fixing of wages or hours in any industries where minimum wages are above 40 cents an hour and hours are 40 per week or less. Gives administrator and boards power to fix wages and hours as low as they see fit.

MARSEILLE, France—(AP)—The 2,810-ton French steamer Prado radiated today she was being attacked "by planes" in the Mediterranean 15 miles off Valencia, Spain.

The attack came at 11:15 a. m. and lasted for about 15 minutes, according to reports from the Prado. The ship was hit in the hull and the engine room. She was forced to stop and the crew was ordered to abandon ship.

The Prado was en route from Marseille to Valencia. She was carrying a cargo of wheat and other supplies. The attack was attributed to Italian aircraft.

The Prado was the first of a series of ships to be attacked in the Mediterranean. The French government has ordered all ships to take extra precautions.

SCHOOL BOARD ACTION COVERS ALL IN SYSTEM

Order Effective on Sept. 1. Adopted as Result of Smallpox Outbreak.

ONLY 58 NOT INOCULATED

Pupils Will Be Banned From Classes Unless They Can Show Certificates.

Vaccination against smallpox was made compulsory for all children who enter Mansfield schools after Sept. 1, 1938, and all teachers and employees of the schools at a meeting of the Mansfield board of education late yesterday.

The board's resolution which was adopted without a dissenting vote and with little discussion, followed a recommendation of the city health board calling for preschool immunization.

Urges Diphtheria Inoculation.

The school board also recommended that children of pre-school age be immunized against diphtheria, but took no action to make it mandatory.

The ruling, enacted in an attempt to prevent a recurrence of the smallpox outbreak now prevalent in the city, requires that pupils entering Mansfield public schools must show a certificate of successful vaccination against smallpox and that pupils now in school will not be permitted to enroll next fall unless they are vaccinated before then.

Supt. W. J. Miller told the board last night that only 53 of the 6,300 pupils now attending the city's public schools have not been vaccinated. Twenty-six of them are in John Simpson Junior high school and Bowman school, while 27 are in the 11 other schools.

First Isolation Period Over.

The first pupils sent home for the 14-day isolation period required by the health board in the current smallpox outbreak will be permitted to return to school tomorrow, Miller said.

The isolation period started Feb. 6, and other pupils who began absences after that date will be eligible to resume classes at the expiration of a 14-day period.

Pupils absent from classes included the 53 who were not vaccinated, either because their health did not permit it or because of the objections of their parents.

The motion requiring pre-school vaccination was introduced by Dr. John S. Hattery, vice president of the board, who said that children between the ages of two and six years can be immunized against diphtheria without experiencing any ill effects. After they are vaccinated, the reaction from inoculation may be troublesome, he said.

The board adopted a resolution of thanks to parents of school pupils for their co-operation in providing an almost 100 per cent vaccination defense against the spread of smallpox in the present outbreak. Miller pointed out that every pupil in the special schools (Continued on Page 11, Col. 4)

'BROKE' AGAIN

School Board Funds Low, So It Seeks Tax Advance.

How to pay bills amounting to $3,000 with a $3,350 treasury fund troubled members of the Mansfield board of education at their meeting last night, but they finally decided to await developments and hope for the best.

With the 1938 financial picture all an uncertainty, the board authorized Dr. John H. Bristol, clerk, to obtain "as much as possible" in an advance settlement on the first-half real estate tax collection and to borrow against state Foundation notes "when the state allocates funds."

Despite the depleted general fund and the clouded future, Bristol said arrangements would be made to pay teachers in two weeks. But some of the bills may have to wait until the board can borrow some money, he said.

By VIRGINIA LEE
"DEAR MISS LEE: I read about 'Worried Mother,' and as I had the same things to put up with I thought a few pointers might help her.
"Like Worried Mother, I have two children, and my husband went astray before my last baby was born. We separated and he asked again and again for another chance, but I had lost all respect for him, and I thought, love.
"But as time went one the little ones missed him, and as it seemed unfair to them, we went together again. I made up my mind to go back and forgive everything, never to throw the other woman's name at him, and if it was love he wanted, I would PRETEND to love him more than ever. As he seemed so sorry for everything he was more than glad to forget.
"I would like to tell Worried Mother that if she goes back, never to speak the other woman's name, and let them both try to forget her. And to make up her mind not only to go half way, but all the way, and after a while she will love him as much or more than ever, as he will be more than willing to help her forget, if he is at all sorry for what he did. I know you will be much happier if you can do this. I don't regret what I did.
"A HAPPY READER."
Thank you, Happy Reader. That is a "swell" letter, and should help a good many women settle this hard problem.
M.H.P. is another young girl (19) who thinks her mother doesn't understand her. She is sure she is not unreasonable in wanting to go out and have a good time occasionally, but her mother calls her outings "gaudings," and how M.H.P. hates that word!
She feels she cannot bear to stay at home much longer, and told her father that as soon as she is 21 she will leave their "crazy home." Her mother is snappish when daughter asks a question, too, and M.H.P. feels sure her mother isn't her "best friend." However, she will take my advice.
Mothers do get like that. M. H. P. They are so fond of their children, with them, and sometimes are unreasonable in thinking they go out too much. And women often get irritable, without realizing it, and make wholly unnecessary answers when a question is asked them when in that mood. Too bad. I have always contended that parents—mothers especially—should be perfect because then they wouldn't make mistakes that affect their children so. However, their maker didn't create them that way, so they have all the faults of the rest of us human beings.
I would use the "soft answer" with your mother, dear. If you are sure you are not unreasonable in wanting to go out—the number of times you go, I need not say, and try to understand that sometimes your mother is tired and not well, and that is the cause of her impatience with you.
It is quite a common thing for mother and daughter to clash in the home, but when daughter leaves, and especially when she has a home of her own and children, they grow closer and understand each other better.

—Beauty— Daily Diet Important to True Beauty

By GLADYS GLAD
"America's Most Famous Beauty."
Some years ago, when the craze for slenderness first originated, women went slightly daffy on the subject. Boudoirs became gymnasia over night. Kitchen rolling pins became fat reducers. Females became hunger-strikers. Appetites became forgotten desires. And as a result, a good many women became unattractive shadows of their former selves.
Today women have a much saner attitude toward reducing. When the average girl becomes unattractively overweight, she has the same urge to reduce, but she also has sense enough to go about the thing sanely, to choose a reducing diet that is well balanced. She realizes that she can't overwork and over-stuff her stomach with all manner of foods and still retain her natural loveliness. Yet a good many women seem to forget that the daily diet not only affects the contours of the figure, but also influences the hair, skin, nails, eyes and other features.
Milk Gives Calcium
All physical beauty, you know, is basically dependent upon good health: one must know how to eat properly. That's why we beauty culturists harp so much on the value of a well-balanced daily diet. We know just how important proper eating is to health and beauty.
In the course of my career as a beauty culturist, I have found that while most women consume sufficient of the animal and vegetable foods to maintain good health, they are likely to neglect the mineral requirements of their bodies. And people, like plants, cannot thrive without sufficient of the mineral salts.
The mineral salts are essential in the diet because they are necessary to keep the body running smoothly. Calcium and phosphorus are the elements that give strength and solidity to the bones and teeth. And iron helps the blood transport oxygen all over the body. It is iron that gives color to your red blood corpuscles and, indirectly, a becoming pinkness to your cheeks and lips.
Milk is the chief source of calcium. And every person, regardless of age or sex, should consume at least a pint of milk a day for the protective mineral elements that it contains. Most adults have the idea that milk is only a baby's food, but dietitians insist that it is every bit as important for adults as it is for children.
Mineral Salts Vital
Iron, another important mineral salt, is supplied chiefly by eggs, spinach, raisins, milk, cabbage, celery and like vegetables. And any girl who wants to keep her pretty red cheeks, her lustrous hair and her trim silhouette should see to it that her daily diet contains sufficient of these foods to keep her blood pure and her body strong and healthy.
In addition to eating properly, however, the girl who wants to have a perfect body must not neglect her exercises. That does not mean, of course, that she must practice boring calisthenics every day.

If West had now decided to continue clubs, the contract would have been perfectly safe, but realizing this he switched to the heart Q, on which East played the heart 7. When South now cashed two diamonds, West threw away his two hearts, counting on East for the 10.
The spade finesse was now tried and lost to West's Q and a spade returned, so declarer was unable to make his game.

THEATER

THE row between Gene Autry, the Western star and Republic pictures is taking the course of all such rows. The company has named a "successor" to the popular singing cowboy, just as M-G-M named a successor for Freddie Bartholomew when his relatives threatened to take him out of pictures. The one thing companies never quite get through their pates is that they don't select the movie idols—the fans do that for themselves. Officials should have learned that important fact however, remembering the fortunes that have been spent on ballyhoo to make new idols of foreign impersonations and unknown players. Money can't do the trick—as witness the millions that have been spent to make Marion Davies a popular star over a period of two decades. So in the long run Autry holds the ace cards, because he was No. 1 box office attraction last year among the Western stars and there are 7,500 theaters in the United States showing "horse opera" pictures.

Star Is Born.
One foreign importation however, who doesn't need ballyhoo or money to make her a star, is the little Vietnamese, Francisca Gaal who makes her American picture debut with Freddie March in "The Buccaneer", which the Ohio shows through Wednesday. Even in this splendidly filmed swash-buckling story, with an outstanding cast, the newcomer holds the center of the screen with her charm, beauty, a most appealing voice and a delightful mimicry. She combines a depth and maturity of emotion, the little Dutch girl from the Zinder Zoo, who falls in love with the most colorful of all American pirates, Jean LeFitte. The story

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON
Continuation of "Married Comrades"

Miss Whitlock and I watched Mary with tender, sympathetic smiles as she read the contents of the envelope tucked into the basket of exquisite roses which had so aroused her ire when she thought her father-in-law had maliciously selected it. I knew that the nurse had noticed the comment of the hotel manager, which had given me my clue to the possible meaning of the basket of roses, and that she shared my comprehension of the joy upon Mary's face.
"Auntie Madge!" Mary lifted her transformed face from the note and extended a tremulous hand toward me in an appealing gesture, the other hand tightly clutching the basket as if she never meant to let it go. "These roses are from Noel. You must be clairvoyant, as I thought. You must be clairvoyant. How did you know? You must have known or you wouldn't have asked me to look at the card with the roses."
I crossed the room and took the outstretched hand in mine, smiling tenderly down at her.
"There's no clairvoyance or hocus-focus about it," I told her. "You were too excited to notice, but when the hotel manager left the room he spoke of 'another order'. The expression 'gave me to think,' as our French brethren say, and I thought you ought to look at the basket before you gave it to Miss Whitlock."
"I fancy I'm out that basket," Miss Whitlock said, smiling.
"You are this one," Mary replied, her fingers lightly touching the exquisite roses. "But you must take a bouquet of orchids and one of roses from the other flowers. You and Auntie Madge divide them and put them anywhere you choose. I have all I want right here."
"I don't think the words 'my husband' and 'my wife' are ever uttered with such pride—although tinged with shyness—as by newly-wedded couples. Mary's utterance of the words was like a clarion call. 'You know he had to leave at daylight this morning,' she said. 'Yes, I know.' I answered, with vivid memories of the tragic parting between the young husband and wife.
"Out of His Way.
"He didn't have to go through the city. Indeed, it was out of his way," she went on, "but he was determined to have a welcoming message for me from him when I arrived, so he stepped on the gas and got over here to the hotel in record time. He wrote the note and then described the kind of roses he wanted, and the basket in detail to the night clerk. I guess he drew a diagram for him, and left beaucoup money to carry out his instructions. And then he beat it to New Hampshire. Pretty clever and thoughtful of the lad I call it. And his instructions must have been accurate, for the basket of roses is just the last word, isn't it?"

"It is exquisite," Miss Whitlock and I said together, and then I recalled the discretion of the manager in getting out of the way of a scene. I knew that there were details of registration he wished to complete, and that the housekeeper was probably waiting in the corridor to see us, so elaborate had been the extra attentions given us, tribute to the lavishness of Philip Veritren.
"I think we would better hang up our hats and wraps now," I said, "and then I'll call the housekeeper in from the corridor, and plan to get settled."

If West had now decided to continue clubs, the contract would have been perfectly safe, but realizing this he switched to the heart Q, on which East played the heart 7. When South now cashed two diamonds, West threw away his two hearts, counting on East for the 10.

The spade finesse was now tried and lost to West's Q and a spade returned, so declarer was unable to make his game.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Feb. 23.
A VERY lively and prosperous day is forecast by the prevailing planetary influences. There is much to be gained from constructive efforts and hard work, especially in the launching of new projects of importance. These may attract the substantial co-operation of large interests or influential friends, but it would be well not to become entangled in scheme or dubious investments. An element of the subtle or underhand means financial safety. Anxiety about an elderly woman is indicated.
If This Is Your Birthday.
Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a very active and prosperous year, with much stirring in new business or the launching of bold propositions. These may gain the support of big business or the capital of old friends, but certain secret or underhanded transactions should be avoided.
A child born on this day may be energetic, competent and ambitious. It may attract the endorsement and financial support of elders, and friends of prestige and position.
Ants go where they find food and if none is left around they will soon disappear. Leave no food about on shelves or in open places.
Make tart shells on the inverted side of muffin tins. Cut the pastry in rounds and fill it closely to the muffin tins. Pick the pastry with a fork.
Save all lamb fat. It makes excellent shortening for gingerbread and cookies.

ANOTHER CASE OF STOMACH CATARRH

World's Tonic is Doing Wonders Right Here in Your Own Home Town Mansfield Man Tells What a Wonderful Benefit He Derived from This Method of Treatment

The poisons of catarrh work insidiously throughout the system and wherever the seat of the disease may be it usually manifests itself in irregularity of the stomach and bowels. World's Tonic, the new method of treatment is designed to help eliminate the poisons from the system, help heal the sores from which the poisons come and help purify the run down system. That it does this repeatedly in serious cases is proved in many instances—but none more pronounced than in the case reported here. We let the gentleman tell his own story.
"All my troubles of body have left me since I began taking World's Tonic and I can work all the time now. I suffered with catarrh of the bowels for twelve years—first I would have severe diarrhea and then I would be constipated and was in almost constant pain with the soreness of my bowels. My tongue was always coated. Sometimes I was hungry and again I couldn't eat a bite. Now my appetite is healthy, my bowels are regular and the pain and soreness are all gone. I feel like a new man."

NEW FHA PLAN TO HELP SMALL U. S. BUSINESS

'Little Fellows' Get Chance For Funds to Repair and Remodel Establishments.

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The "little business man's" problem of procuring funds for alterations and repairs of his establishment is met by the new regulations of the National Housing act amendments of 1937, according to Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing administrator.

In fact, the problem of procuring funds for the repair, alteration or improvement of existing commercial and industrial establishments as well as covering the financing from private lending institutions for the construction of certain new structures is given specific treatment in the new Modernization Credit plan, Mr. McDonald said.

Provides Incentive.

While the Federal Housing administration does not lend any money for these or any other purposes, its insurance under the Property Improvement Credit plan up to 10 per cent of the aggregate amounts loaned by private lending institutions for such purposes provides sufficient security and incentive for such institutions to make such credit available, Mr. McDonald explained.

Under the new regulations, ample provision is made to cover the financing needs of the smaller businesses of the country for repair, alteration and improvement. No limit is placed on the amount of funds which may be borrowed from private lending institutions for such purposes. Mr. McDonald explained, although the maximum insurable amount of a loan on any single piece of property is $10,000.

Field Stone With Wood Trim

SIMPLICITY is always an admirable quality in the small house. This one has it.

Rough stone effectively combines with white wood trim to make an unusually attractive exterior for this Brookline, Mass., home.

The compact plan throws living room and dining room together for spaciousness, and includes what most masculine home-owners crave — a study well located for privacy. The first floor lavatory can be reached easily from the living rooms. Upstairs are three well-closeted bedrooms and a bathroom big enough to turn around in without bumping an elbow.

Architect Samuel Glaser designed this plan which was selected by the Architectural Forum, 135 East 42nd St., New York, N. Y.

CLEANS STONE

An efficient cleaning preparation for unglazed stone door sills is made from one gallon of good soft soap one pint clear ammonia solution and two pounds of finely powdered pumice stone. The stone should first be thoroughly cleaned of soot and dust, the mixture applied and allowed to stand for a half hour or more. Then scrub well into the surface of the stone with a stiff brush or broom. Rinse off thoroughly with clear water. If one application is not sufficient, repeat the process a second time.

WHITE-PANELLED

A dining room with a fireplace emphasizes its Colonial atmosphere by adding panelling to the hearth wall and painting this panelling white, ivory or cream. The three remaining walls may be of another color but must be kept very light in tone. A pale green contrasts nicely with white panelling and trim and with a dark green spatter-work floor. Maple, mahogany or pine period furniture will be beautiful in this room.

SUNROOM PLAN

A color combination for a sunroom includes walls of old rose subdued with grey and a ceiling of grayish-pink. Black woodwork trimmed with green is echoed in the coloring of the floor which is painted black with a border of grayish-green. Blue and black draperies flank curtains of lemon yellow gauze. The cushions on the black-painted furniture are of the same material as the draperies. A lemon yellow shade tops a lamp base of old blue.

PROTECTS WALLS

When polishing brasswork attached to wall surfaces, there will be less risk of soiling the paint if an opening is cut in a piece of cardboard to surround the object to be polished. Then the polishing cloth will touch the cardboard and not the wall surface.

STATISTICAL BUREAU, OHIO ASSN. OF RETAIL LUMBER DEALERS

8 PER CENT OF COST OF HOME FOR LUMBER, DEALERS DECLARE

Lumber constitutes 32.1 per cent of the cost of a modern wood-framed home built in Ohio, according to a survey just completed by the Ohio Association of Retail Lumber dealers, results of which were announced today by the Home Materials company here.

The survey, conducted by the association's statistical bureau, covered construction figures on 60 homes built in the last three months of 1937. Values of the houses represented varied from $2,500 to $20,000, the majority being below $7,000. All the homes were plastered, painted, equipped with hot-air heating systems, and were of approved architectural design.

While lumber accounted for 1-12 of the total cost, millwork and flooring, including the cost of laying the latter, increased the total percentage of wood products to 22.25. The above chart, showing the complete distribution

Seeks Vote By Nightfall on $250,000,000 Relief Fund

SENATE HEARS PLAN TO HAVE CITIES HELP

Bailey Offers Proposal To Have Municipalities Stand Fourth of Cost.

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON—Senator Bailey (D-N.C.) attempted today to insert in the $250,000,000 emergency relief bill a requirement that cities pay one-fourth of the cost of relief projects.

Under his proposal, advanced unsuccessfully last year by the late Senator Robinson (D-Ark.), the president could waive that contribution if he found some communities could not meet it.

Oppose Amendment.

Democratic leaders, seeking a final vote on the bill before nightfall, opposed Bailey's amendment as well as one by Senator Bone (D-Wash.) to increase the appropriation to $400,000,000. They defeated yesterday a proposal by Senator Hayden (D-Ariz.) to prevent construction of any building with WPA funds.

Debate on the emergency measure, already passed by the house, proceeded rapidly after the senate broke the legislative jam yesterday by shelving the anti-lynching bill. Both chambers, however, agreed to take time out this afternoon for the annual reading of George Washington's farewell address.

When the relief bill is out of the way, the senate will debate the bill to appropriate $1,412,069,465 for expenses of the government's independent agencies.

Asks Fund Return.

Senator Wagner (D-N.Y.) said he would try to restore $350,000 cut from funds for the national labor relations board by the senate appropriations committee. The house fixed the board's expenditures at $2,955,000.

Next on the senate calendar will be the administration's reorganization program, passed last Friday. By the time action on it is completed, the house probably will have finished debating the naval expansion and tax revision measures.

This tentative schedule raised the hopes of legislators for an early adjournment.

Demand Apology From Butler To Communist League

NEW YORK (INS)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, august and internationally famous president of Columbia university, today was faced with a demand by the student body, undergraduate governing body, that he publicly apologize to the Young Communists league.

The apology was demanded because Dr. Butler denied Robert Burke, communist orator and former Columbia student, the right to return to the campus last Friday night to address a public meeting. Burke was expelled in 1936 for leading an anti-Nazi demonstration in front of Dr. Butler's home.

Friday, Burke was arrested by a campus detective and ordered to leave Columbia property immediately. Dr. Butler had no comment to day. The board's action for an apology to the Young Communist league for the perfunctory manner in which their approved plans were altered and the rude manner in which their invited guest was treated.

Navy Doubles Area for Pacific Maneuvers

UP and DOWN THE STREET

Veterans of the Rainbow division (42nd) are celebrating a two-way event this evening with a dinner which commemorates the 20th anniversary of their going into the trenches, and the organizing of their Mansfield chapter, the Luther Swigart. Twenty years ago today the Rainbow division went into the trenches at Benemerita, Alsace-Lorraine, France, with the temperature considerably lower than it is today, and with a snowstorm to add to their troubles. About their only comfort was the assurance that they were fighting "a war to end all wars."

H. W. Arlin and W. C. Mead, Mansfield school board members, didn't propose any action at last night's board meeting, but they think something ought to be done about teaching spelling in high schools. Stenographers are notoriously poor spellers, they said, most of them, giving the excuse that they had no spelling after they left grade school. "It's not the big words they miss, either, but the ones they use every day," Mead pointed out. "I'm for making the dictionary a part of every secretary's equipment and I favor more spelling and less of other things in school."

Motion pictures during the noon hour at Senior high school, an innovation started last year, is decidedly popular with the student body. A recent poll 811 students voted approval, while maybe those 17 can't take their motion pictures in "serial" form, for that's the way they are presented. The features which ordinarily run between an hour and a half and two hours, are presented to the school two weeks at a time, and sometimes the two reels end at the most exciting moments in the picture.

Why doesn't someone invent a rolling pin that would operate like a steam roller for those ice box cookies? The dough sometimes presents a problem not unlike rolling and cement out into a nice smooth sheet. A Mansfield housewife gave her cookie recipe to friends the other afternoon at a card party, and after listing the ingredients and instructions, ended with "and cuss while rolling." Those who have tried the recipe have concluded that the final instruction was necessary.

LEWIS IN CITY

Band Leader Arrives at Noon For One-Day Stand.

Ted Lewis, master showman, who has built a career around the salutation "Is Everybody Happy," arrived in Mansfield early this afternoon from Pittsburgh, where he played a one-night engagement, and just in time to make the first afternoon show at the Madison theater, where he is being presented this afternoon and evening.

Lewis heads his own "Main Street" band and is the headliner of his own show. One of the features which never fails to appeal to the audience is the illusion of the Main Street parade, with the high-batted comedian swinging jauntily across the stage at the head of the parade.

On his program are the Ben Yost Varsity Co-Eds, six "lovely ladies of rhythm"; his featured dancers, the Sylvia Mason four; Gaye Dixon, singer of swing songs; Ray Royce, eccentric dancer; Theo Ray, Loreta Lane, Betty Dickerson; and of course, Lewis' "shadow," Snowball Whittier.

The Ted Lewis revue is supplemented with a feature film, "Love Is a Headache," with Franchot Tone and Gladys George.

HEAR PHASES OF HOME BUILDING

Architects, Builders and Real Estate Dealers Guests At Dinner Meeting.

Sixty architects, contractors, builders and realtors from Mansfield and Ashland, heard discussions of three phases of home building last night at a dinner meeting at the Mansfield-Leland hotel as guests of the Ohio Public Service company.

Speakers were Miss Isabelle Berry, Cleveland, representing the Light Saving council, who urged proper consideration by the building industry for proper lighting and demonstrated, by slides, the newest lighting equipment.

Norman Wooders, of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, stressed the importance and value of air-conditioning in modern home construction, and I. W. Clark, manager of the kitchen planning section of Westinghouse told of the rapid strides made in scientific kitchen arrangement in the past few years, and showed diagrams of efficient, modern kitchens in which the housewife's work is made easier and faster, through proper arrangement of equipment, working surfaces and storage space.

Kenneth Ede, Cleveland, advertising manager of the Ohio Public Service company, introduced the speakers. The meeting was arranged by Joy A. Herbert, business manager of the Mansfield division of the company.

CHICAGO HUNTING FRIENDS OF SLAIN WEALTHY GERMAN EXILE

(By International News Service) CHICAGO—With the Civil Liberties committee taking an active interest, investigation into the slaying of Dr. Max Bernhard Sammet today centered on his secret circle of wealthy friends.

The killing of the exiled German Jew who was studying here for a dentist's license, might have been connected in some way with his antipathy toward the Nazi regime, authorities said.

As the Civil Liberties group revealed it had sought aid from the department of justice to solve the slaying mystery, it was learned that Dr. Sammet had frequently hinted of "some friends on the north side."

Police said they were attempting to identify the people to determine if the doctor had other than social connections with them.

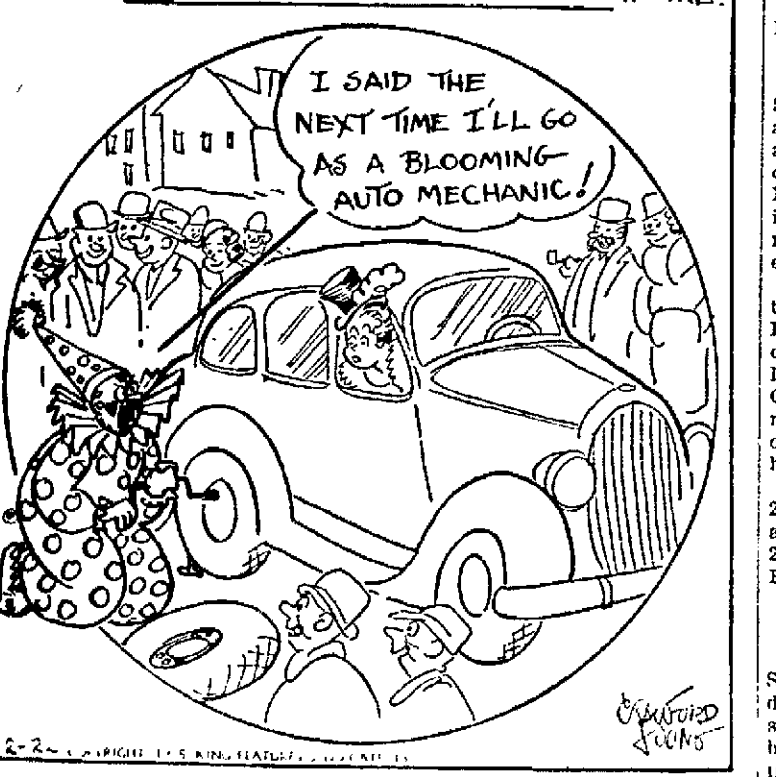

Other acquaintances, however, scouted the theory that Dr. Sammet had been involved in some international intrigue that might have led to his death. His widow, Mrs. Inge Sammet was due here from New York today and was expected to shed light on his activities.

The reputedly wealthy dental surgeon was said to have left a lucrative practice at Bad Neuhem, Germany, where he had a fashionable clientele, because of religious persecution. Among his patients were reported to have been the late Irving Thalberg, motion picture producer, Norma Shearer and Lillian Gish. He had been in Chicago since last summer.

He was found slain under the porch of an abandoned building Sunday, but robbery was apparently not the motive as his wallet was untouched and he was still wearing an expensive fur-lined coat as well as his wrist watch and a ring.

60,000 OF U.S. FORCES TO BE IN WAR GAME

12,000,000 Square Miles to Be 'Patrolled' for Period of Nearly 6 Weeks.

(By Associated Press) WASHINGTON—American naval maneuvers beginning in the Pacific ocean next month, officials disclosed today, will cover more than twice the territory utilized in last year's mock battles.

The maneuvers, largest in the nation's naval history, will progress over 12,000,000 square miles for nearly six weeks.

Last year's war games, highlighted by the theoretical destruction of Honolulu, involved only 5,000,000 square miles.

The navy high command indicated that the newly-strengthened rules for secrecy on ship construction would be carried over into the maneuvers.

Fleet commanders will have a ruling issued by Secretary Swanson last December, to the effect that "peepers" may be driven off with gunfire, or taken captive.

60,000 Participate.

Nearly 60,000 officers and men—more than half the navy's personnel—will be engaged in directing the 150 warships and 500 airplanes from the Pacific coasts to Hawaii and from Alaska to Samoa. The 1937 games involved 139 vessels and 47 planes.

This year the fleet will spread out to include southern Pacific waters. It will "defend" American Samoa and will try to prevent a flank attack from the south by a Pacific "enemy."

Admiral Claude C. Bloch, new commander of the Pacific fleet, will be in charge.

An announcement of the forthcoming maneuvers served to dramatize the administration's request for a 20 per cent expansion of the navy's fighting force. The house will debate the problem early next month.

Rear Admiral William G. Dubose, chief of naval construction, told a house committee that the proposed fleet expansion would require 8 or 10 years.

Dubose, questioned by Representative Scott (D-Calif.), said he did not know whether a battleship could enter the Mexican west coast harbor of Mazatlan. Scott said he had read reports that Japan was negotiating to improve the Mexican coast.

The Mexican ambassador, Francisco Castillo Najera, said after exchanging communications with the government that such reports were "completely lacking in basis."

The Great Game of Politics

—By FRANK R. KENT

NOT OFTEN, in either state or national elections, is a clear-cut question presented to the people. Usually the voters are thoroughly confused by torrents of propaganda and the salient facts are blurred by appeals to their prejudices and emotions. It is seldom, indeed, the vital issue, unclouded by personalities and local considerations, is clear.

Now will it be in the senatorial contest this fall in Indiana, if the McNutt machine, with its highly vocal appendages, Governor Townsend and Senator Sherman Minton, can prevent. Nevertheless, the announcement by Senator Frederick Van Nuys of his intention to run as an independent candidate to succeed himself this fall, puts up to the people of the state a proposition simple enough for almost anyone to understand. In brief, it can be stated as follows: are they going to permit the politicians to drive out of public life a decent man, solely because, with full knowledge of the personal political peril involved and resisting heavy pressure, he was according to his honest conviction, to what was best for the country and best for the people.

THAT IS ALL there is to it. Whether or not the McNutt organization succeeds in confusing the issue with personal attacks which have already begun, the only question really involved is whether Van Nuys is to be punished for exhibiting the sort of courage and character that ordinary people like to see in their representatives. The facts are clear and indisputable. Van Nuys was one of the Democratic Senators who voted against the president's court-packing bill. Politically, he had every political reason for lining up with the administration forces, as did his league. If he had considered his personal political fortunes he undoubtedly would have supported the president. There is no conceivable reason, and none has ever been suggested, for his voting against the bill except his conviction that it was the right thing to do.

IMMEDIATELY after the vote the threats began. Governor Townsend came to Washington and, after a talk with Mr. Roosevelt, declared on the White House steps that Van Nuys would not be renominated. This declaration has been echoed by the McNutt politicians down the line. Clearly, it is impossible for Van Nuys to defeat the machine in the primary. Hence, in advance of the flamboyant Mc Nutt's much-advertised visit to Washington and his quite obvious candidacy for the 1940 presidential nomination, Van Nuys declares his purpose of being an independent candidate and calls for the formulation of a nonpartisan committee to help him.

IT IS TOO BAD that this chance is to be thrown away. By refusing to nominate against Van Nuys, Indiana Republicans could insure his re-election and beat the McNutt machine, put a considerable dent in McNutt's presidential ambitions, protect a conscientious public servant from White House reprisals and perform a real national service. All this the Republican politicians are willing to sacrifice for the chance of permitting an old-time Republican war horse to squeeze in between the two Democratic factions. However, there is no reason the Republican voters have to follow the Republican politicians and the hope is that enough of them will support Van Nuys in the general election. Under the circumstances, the fight in Indiana has a national significance. A Van Nuys victory there would be one of the most heartening things that have happened in American politics in a long time.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—First day after he announced he would sail for the West Indies in his new boat, Errol Flynn received 24 letters from fans who wanted to go along—with or without pay. The letters are still coming.

The new boat, formerly the "Avonir," is being rechristened the "Sirocco." As Flynn doubtless is aware, sirocco is the name given in Algeria to the simoon, or "big hot wind."

Despite all his vaunted wanderlust, don't look for Errol to shake off the mud of Hollywood permanently. He's only human, and humans really don't sneer at Hollywood's rewards.

In "White Banners" Claude Rains plays the role of a benevolent gentleman who gives fatherly advice to young Jackie Cooper. The embarrassing thing is that Jackie, at 15, has sprouted up until he's taller than Rains. So in all these scenes Jackie has to be bent over a work bench or a desk while Rains stands beside him, to make Rains look bigger. For all that, Jackie isn't too grown-up yet. He kissed his uncle, Raymond Tamm, by way of congratulations, after the "Tom Sawyer" preview.

Fritz Lane is a director who helps in MOVING pictures. During filming of "You and Me" he virtually has monopolized Paramount's two camera boys. He made the camera dance with George Raft and Sylvia Sydney for one sequence. When the camera isn't moving, the actors—at least for one scene the other day—were mechanically transported.

This was a scene on a department store escalator. Raft coming down, Sidney going up, their hands meeting briefly in passing. Scene was a close-up of the hands, and the stars—no doubles allowed—were at it, off and on, nearly three hours. Very important scene, said monocled Fritz, "because it's the first time we show these two have a romantic interest. It's a romantic interest, but don't forget, it was made "Fury" the picture was by just such attention to detail.

A parking lot attendant button-holed me for five minutes telling me what a terrible picture "A Damsel in Distress" was. Having liked it, I was surprised when he said the audience was as impatient with it as he. And then it came out: He'd seen it on a multiple bill which included the long "Killer Fero" serial short and newsreels, AND Bank Night!

MT. GILEAD—Funeral services for Mrs. Emma F. Mollison, 68, wife of Dr. James T. Mollison, who died at her home here Sunday, will be held at the Craven funeral home at 2 p. m. Wednesday with Rev. S. Hardy of Marion officiating. Burial will be in Rivercliff cemetery.

A resident of Morrow county 32 years, Mrs. Mollison was born in Matck, Mass. Surviving besides her husband are a daughter, Katherine; two sisters, Mrs. Lillian Abbott and Mrs. Lucille Davis of St. Petersburg, Fla., and two brothers, Maj. Richmond Favour of Washington, D. C. and Alpheus H. Favour of Prescott, Ariz.

RUSHES PROFITS TAX REVISIONS

House Committee Nears Finish Of Plan to Spur Business

By Easing Levies.
(By International News Service)
WASHINGTON—The administration's new tax bill, which revises the undistributed profits and capital gains taxes in an effort to spur business, probably will be called up in the house next week.

After the ways and means committee completed work on the bill with the exception of odds and ends, Rep. Vinson (D.) of Kentucky, chairman of the subcommittee which drafted it, said the measure is virtually complete.

The committee, after reading the bill, adjourned Tuesday afternoon, adjourned today to permit drafting experts to complete their work.

The proposed special penalty tax on family-owned and closely-held corporations, which do not distribute all of their earnings, was adopted by a vote of 15 to 10. Three Democrats joined seven Republicans in opposition.

Under this tax, a 20 per cent tax would be levied on undistributed profits of family and closely-held corporations earning above $75,000 a year, with a series of exemptions.

The tax was assailed in a radio speech by Rep. Lannack (D.) of Ohio, as a blow to the development of new corporations and growth of small ones, and as an aid to monopoly.

CITES REASONS FOR ILL FEELING

Englishman Blames 'Economic Stupidity' for Discord Among Nations.

and paid its debts by shipping raw materials to other parts of the world," he declared, "but since the war left it a creditor nation, it has been unable to pay its debts and has been forced to borrow from other nations."

Equally critical of Great Britain, Booth said the British have attempted to "eat their economic cake and have it," by favoring their colonies to the exclusion of others in world trade.

Because the United States and Great Britain, as satisfied countries trying to hold onto what they have, can't understand that there are other less fortunate, there has been almost worldwide retaliation against their policies, he said.

Describing Germany, Italy and Japan as "dissatisfied nations," Booth said they are aggressive because the economic pressure applied by England, France and the United States forces them to be.

"The indignation of the German people at restrictions imposed upon them following the World war has crystallized in Hitler and Fascism, and England and France are largely to blame because of their short-sighted discrimination," Booth asserted.

A similar situation exists in Japan, he said, "the people have read their history and have heard that more colonies and riches have often been gained by aggressive methods."

In a humorous vein, Booth said the United States has been pretty harsh with Great Britain by demanding she pay her war debts in dollars and not English pounds. "But you have been patient—which is more than some of the others have been—and maybe before long Britain can re-establish her foreign trade and get enough money to pay up," he added.

Says War Threat Lifted.
Asked during the forum period that followed his talk if there is immediate danger of war, Booth said an European conflict is not likely within the next three or four years.

"The threat of war has lifted somewhat in the past six months, and unless the re-armament program now under way causes the world powers to stiffen and become too independent, war is not imminent," he declared.

Booth added that it is doubtful if Germany will ever absorb Austria despite the spread of Nazi influence into the Austrian nation, because Austria and Germany are too close together and Mussolini probably would not permit Hitler to take over Austria, without offering some protest.

Questioned about the resignation yesterday of Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, Booth said he was "sorry that Eden was forced to quit, because his idealism served as a balance for the material cabinet, and I liked his policy best."

Booth was introduced last night by Harold A. Bruce, of the University club and chairman of the committee in charge of the institute.

The speaker next Monday night will be Professor Harry H. Love, of Cornell university, who will talk on "The Rise of Nationalism in China." The final lecture in the series of five will be given Tuesday night, March 8, by Allen D. Albert, sociologist and lecturer and former associate publisher of the Minneapolis Tribune.

SEES 'HARM' IN PROPOSED SHIFT IN LEGISLATURE

Unicameral Plan Wouldn't Would Improve System, Opponent Declares.

(Editor's Note: The United Press has obtained information from two men who offer arguments for and against a proposed one-house legislature for Ohio. Today, E. J. Bath, of the Ohio Farm Bureau, offers arguments against the proposal, which was supported by Professor Harvey Walker of Ohio State university in yesterday's article.)

By RICHARD A. BLACKBURN (United Press Staff Correspondent)

COLUMBUS—E. J. Bath, who is "proud to be known as a lobbyist" for the Ohio Farm Bureau, today condemned the proposed constitutional amendment for a one-house legislature on the grounds that it will not improve the legislative system and may even make for worse conditions.

He insisted in opposition to the Ohio Single House Legislature league which is sponsoring initiative petitions to put the proposal on the ballot in November that the present system of representation is equitable and represents a proper balance between rural and urban constituencies.

"We have no territorial and population representation," Bath said. "We think it is unhealthy for either rural or urban to dominate. There ought to be a balance of expression. We now have the senate for population representation and the house on a territorial basis."

Cites Representation.

He said apportionment calculations showed that the legislature under the proposed change would consist of either 94 or 95 members. In the one case, he said, 13 generally urban counties would elect 56 members while 75 counties would elect only 38. In the second case 12 counties would elect 57 members while the 76 others would elect only 38.

Bath contended the amendment bringing about a predominantly urban one-house assembly also would make for a continuance of "hodge-podge taxation with a heavy burden on real estate and strengthen opposition to an equitable tax structure."

He pointed specifically to the school foundation program which he said would have been difficult of attainment had there been a single urban house because some city members opposed use of city money to help rural sections. Yet, he said, the "constitution guarantees equality of educational opportunity."

Furthermore, he stated that the rural sections under the proposal would be at a disadvantage in consideration of legislation allocating gasoline and license tax and liquor permit fees.

Bath expressed dislike of a provision in the plan providing that the legislature shall not be in recess or adjournment for longer than three months of any year. He said the amendment gives the legislature authority to appoint the 15-member council from its own members and fix their salaries and the length of their deliberations.

SETS BRITAIN ON NEW TRACK

Chamberlain, Voted Backing By Cabinet, Maps 'Bargain' With Dictators.

Italy was necessary, Chamberlain told parliament yesterday, lest anti-British feeling in Italy rise "to such a point that ultimately war between us might become inevitable."

Italy has been bitter against Britain since Eden led the fight by which economic sanctions were imposed in an effort to check Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

The British ambassador to Rome, the Earl of Perth, was expected to return quickly to London to receive Chamberlain's detailed instructions on how to proceed with the conversations—now that Eden's idealism was discarded.

It seemed certain that Chamberlain alone would dictate the British end of the Italian settlement, with Viscount Halifax remaining as temporary foreign secretary, at least during preliminary negotiations.

British leadership in the Mediterranean, an end to Italian-inspired propaganda in Arab nations, gradual withdrawal of Italian forces in Spain, British recognition of Mussolini's Ethiopian conquest—these are essential points of the settlement.

This sort of deal was supported by the dashing Eden, but he felt Britain was too quick to bargain "rather than that others should make terms with us," and that there would be no progress toward peace "if we allow the impression to gain currency abroad that we yield to constant pressure."

Hits 'Threat' Stand.

Chamberlain summed up his practical attitude and the break with his foreign secretary thus: "Mr. Eden represented that the Italian government called upon us to enter upon conversations now or never and that we are being asked to submit to these threats. There is nothing in any of the communications to justify that description."

Speeded an essential aspect of the Anglo-Italian agreement, because Chamberlain has his eyes on a far reaching settlement of Europe's troubles through the four-power understanding.

Britain had been so busy with the domestic crisis that nothing was done about the desire for a share in British-held colonies, expressed by Fuehrer Hitler in his Reichstag speech on Sunday.

There was widespread belief today that Chamberlain would turn to that next with the same vigor and directness used in cutting short Eden's lengthy and cautious tactics with Italy.

accompanying reporters in his Hyde Park study for the customary Tuesday press conference. There were suggestions that the president might make some observations on the troubled state of world affairs and the increasing trend toward Fascism.

In advance of today's press conference, where President Roosevelt will be directly interrogated on his reaction to Britain's cabinet rift and Hitler's bold statement of Nazi expansion plans, the temporary White House continued to beat back all inquiries with the set answer, "No comment."

Schuschnigg Acts In Nazi Clashes.

VIENNA — (UP) — Police, acting firmly under new instructions from Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, closed the university building today as the result of noisy though minor clashes between Nazi and anti-Nazi students.

At midnight, Schuschnigg had imposed a four-week ban on political demonstrations after giving Nazis three days in which to celebrate the new agreement with Germany.

Students went to classes this morning, however, ready for a fight. Nazis had planned to university in the big hall of the university "Marxist" students released from jail or readmitted to classes after the amnesty. But Catholic students outwitted them, occupied the hall themselves and gave a demonstration for Schuschnigg.

Mounted and foot police, rushed to the scene, put a strong guard around the building while Catholic students sang patriotic songs and Nazis booed and gave the Hitler salute. Then students gathered outside the building and manhandled a couple of onlookers who failed to uncover when one of their anti-Nazi songs was sung. Minor fights broke out.

Police arrested two students, ejected all students from the building, dispersed bystanders and closed the school.

Expect Comment From Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK N. Y. — (INS) — With world attention focused on President Roosevelt and his reaction to the European crisis indications today multiplied that the chief executive might use Washington's birthday as a vehicle to re-state American foreign policy.

This afternoon he was receiving

FIGHT FLOOD

2,000 Battle to Keep Levies From Breaking in Arkansas.

PINE BLUFF, Ark. — (AP) — Nearly 2,000 workers fought today to save levees around this city from the pounding of the flood-swollen Arkansas river.

Renewed rainfall added to the problem confronting WPA workers rushed to the endangered area.

The principal danger point was at a bend in the river north of the city, where a cievasse in the levee threatened inundation of railroad shops.

Emergency crews dumped tons of gravel and rock into the swollen stream just above the crevasse, attempting to deflect the current.

The Arkansas was falling west of Little Rock but the crest of 32 feet was not expected here until tomorrow.

SEEKS 1,000 IN MUSIC CLASSES

Director of New Activity in Schools Aims at Mass Education.

Helping considerably in expanding the work and in affording more children an opportunity in taking instruction are donations of musical instruments for use by students unable to afford purchasing them. Jorgenson said.

Among a number of instruments donated are a highly prized 100-year-old flute and a 75-year-old violin. The flute was given by R. E. Copeland, 88 Park avenue west, and the violin by C. A. Back, 155 East Fifth street.

"The public has been very responsive to the request for old and unused instruments," Jorgenson said. "Those received so far have been put into use. There are still a large number of children who would be helped provided they were equipped with instruments."

Jorgenson pointed out that instruments needing repair will be accepted. These are repaired and placed in the care of devoting youngsters, he said.

Contributors were requested by the supervisor to contact the senior high school where arrangements will be made to call for the instruments.

Court Hears Muskingum Suit at Mt. Vernon Tomorrow

HEARS LEGAL BATTLE OVER LEVY BONDS

Appeals Judges to Decide On $1,500,000 Assessment Now Under Injunction Order.

(By Associated Press)
MOUNT VERNON—The Muskingum Waterway Conservancy district's appeal from an injunction restraining it from issuing $1,500,000 of general levy bonds is scheduled to be heard here tomorrow by the Fifth District Court of Appeals.

The district board of directors voted the proposed bond issue last Aug. 25 as a stop gap measure to pay bills falling due around Jan. 1, 1938, but opponents of the issue declared that one general levy bond issue would open the way for others.

Ahl Grants Order.
The injunction was issued by Common Pleas Judge Clarence U. Ahl of Bucyrus, sitting in Tuscarawas county by assignment, as the result of a suit brought by Charles Hostetter of Massillon, as a taxpayer and pressed by Stark County Prosecutor A. C. L. Bartholme. The Stark county, league and the Canton chamber of commerce.

In a written opinion he restrained the district from issuing and selling the bonds, which would be retired over a 10-year period by a general levy on all real estate in the 14 counties comprising the district.

Hostetter's suit contended that the Ohio statute creating the Conservancy district authorized a general levy only for the purpose of paying for a preliminary survey, and not for cost of acquiring lands or constructing dams and reservoirs.

30-Year Bonds Sold.
The directors voted the general bond issue after the selling of 30-year bonds in anticipation of collection of flood benefit assessments was held up by litigation.

Opponents declared the action might open the way for additional general issues which eventually would force landowners receiving no benefits to share equally in the cost of the gigantic conservancy district.

A Farmer's Diary

Feb. 22.
A few years ago my wife and I visited Mount Vernon, the greatest shrine in North America. It was a fine July morning. The air was filled with the fragrance of flowers, and the many birds from thick wooded country near by, poured forth a jubilant chorus.

This lovely home was built on a high point, with commanding view of the Potomac river in both directions. The house is not a mansion, but built in generous Virginia style, protected by large porches.

We saw the large, colonial kitchen, the spacious living room, where Franklin, Lafayette and many other noted men had sat, the bedroom, with its canopy, desk and tall, canopied, four-poster. I felt abashed to look up to the precious home life of one so great, for here the Farmer of his country dwelt.

His tomb stands a short distance down the hill from the house, but this was not so interesting as the place he lived.

We drove to Valley Forge and camped at the famous spring where Washington and his suffering soldiers received their water supply. The little valley, dotted all about with bronze statues of horse and rider, and marked with tablets on heavy granite boulders, holds for the one who passes through, an atmosphere of reverence. The ground we stepped upon seemed sacred and holy. I felt I could almost hear the prayer for help and guidance in that darkest hour, "Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," perhaps was born in the bosom of this valley.

WRONG VICTIM

Grocer, 66, Slugged by Gunmen, Sends Them Fleeing.

SALEM—(INS)—Police today sought two men who picked the wrong victim to slug when they sandbagged Joseph Bowman, 66-year-old grocer in an attempted robbery.

Bowman, slugged as he entered his home, grabbed one of the pair and wrestled with him, at the same time shouting for help. When the would-be robbers broke loose and started to run, the grocer fired one shot at them with a gun he kept in the house. The shot went wild.

Police today were investigating two week-end burglaries in which thieves made off with $25 in cash—the third in a series that have occurred in as many days.

Both lootings were within two blocks of each other, and were believed to have been committed by the same persons.

At the Harry H. Sweet filling station, 336 West Fourth street, police reported that a thief who left his footprints in the soggy ground at the rear of the station, broke into the establishment and looted a pinball machine of $15 in nickels.

Mark left on the casing of the front door showed that the burglar had used a small iron bar to pry loose the molding and force the door.

Emile Zimmerman, who operates the neighborhood store at 8 Wilton street, less than two blocks away told police that $8 in change had been taken from a cash drawer and an undetermined amount of nickels from a marble machine which had been broken open.

Identical methods used to gain entrance to the store led police to believe that the same persons had looted both places.

FACES CHARGE

Shelby Man Held to Jury in Montgomery County Thefts.

Charged with burglary and larceny in 40 cases in Dayton and Urbana, Carlton Zeitzers, 27, of Shelby, today had been bound over to the Montgomery county grand jury on $1,000 bond.

Zeitzers, suspected of the theft of 15 electric sweepers in Mansfield, confessed to Dayton police the theft of at least a dozen sweepers in southern Ohio cities, including several in Dayton, dispatches added.

The Shelby man, who has served two years in the Mansfield reformatory for burglary, will not be returned to Mansfield unless the Montgomery county courts fail to convict him, Sheriff E. P. Long said.

Long went to Dayton last week to question the suspect concerning the robberies here.

ASSAULT CASE BOND $10,000

Youth Accused of Attacking Wife of Hotel Owner Bound Over to Grand Jury.

Luther M. Stall of Arcadia, who allegedly attacked a North Diamond street hotel proprietor's wife was held in the county jail today under $10,000 bond.

Arraigned before Judge C. E. Kallbfleisch in municipal court for the second time yesterday, Stall, 21, pleaded innocent to a charge of assault with intent to kill, waived preliminary examination and was bound over to the grand jury.

He had previously pleaded innocent to a charge of assault with intent to rape. When the woman was taken to testify against the youth, City Solicitor Marion D. Ward changed the charges on the basis that Stall had threatened the woman's life by choking her.

The youth was captured by police Saturday night after he had fled the hotel. An unloaded revolver which officers said was stolen from a downtown store was found in his possession.

Police were told that Stall went to the hotel and asked for a room and while the woman was showing him the room, he pulled out the gun, shoved her onto the bed and attempted to choke her. He fled when she screamed, she said.

Tells Rotary He Found All Russia Ill-Fed, Ill-Housed

A close-up view of present-day Russia, a soviet rule, was given at today's Rotary meeting by Edward C. Turner, of Columbus, former attorney general of Ohio, who recently returned from a trip abroad, during which he spent considerable time observing conditions in Russia.

"In Russia," said Turner, "there is not the one-third who are ill-nourished, ill-housed and ill-clothed—practically the entire population is in that condition."

"I wish that all communistic sympathizers in this country might be sent to Russia on a visit, so that they could observe conditions for themselves. I predict they would be mighty glad to get back to America."

Turner's trip carried him to a number of Russian cities, including Leningrad, Petrograd and Moscow, and his talk touched on conditions in each of these cities.

William M. Weldon was chairman of the meeting, at which W. L. Miller, president, presided.

LINKS UTILITY OFFICIAL WITH DAVEY 'DEAL'

Bradley Says Willkie Helped Him Make Contacts For 'Donations' To Fund.

Covered Wide Territory.
The slight-statured witness then proceeded to take the committee for a geographical tour, his testimony hopping from Georgia and New York to Iowa, Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas.

A letter from Bradley to Davey, dated Oct. 7, 1932, read in part: "Senator Ryan of Chicago is the logical man to handle your business. The fact that he is a Democrat means nothing, as he is out for Len Small for governor."

In the same letter Bradley suggested that "Mayor Norvony of Berwyn," a Chicago suburb, might be a better man to start out with. He did not explain any of these references to the investigators.

"Most of these letters indicate you were on no mission but to get business, even though through Metzenbaum," he interposed.

"That's right," said Bradley, admitting that several of his exhibits were purely business letters.

Metzenbaum asked who typed Bradley's letters.

"I do," he replied.

"Do you carry your own typewriter?" asked Sen. Bernard R. Donovan (D., Lucas), as committee men noted all the typing was of the same appearance.

"Yes, if I don't have my own typewriter I rent one," responded Bradley.

Arranged Meeting.
The one-time Davey employee proceeded to tell that he arranged in 1933 for Davey to meet U. S. Sen. Joseph Robinson of Arkansas in Washington, because Robinson's law firm represented several southwestern utilities.

A letter from Davey to Bradley in April of that year suggested that it would be best not to see Robinson until the senator expressed some active interest.

Bradley showed an exchange of correspondence he said was with George Huffman of Des Moines, identified by him as chairman of the Democratic executive committee and a large stockholder in Iowa Power and Light company.

A letter to Bradley, bearing Huffman's name, said, "Owing to unsettled conditions and the NRA, I think it best to defer action."

None of these references was explained.

Bradley elicited a chuckle from the committee when he showed a note from Davey, dated Jan. 2, 1934, reading:

"It was sweet of you to send the Christmas greetings."

He next showed a letter on stationery of the Henry L. Doherty company in New York, introducing him to B. L. Adams, president of the Cities Service company of Missouri, and suggesting that Tom Pendergast could "be of assistance."

"Who is Pendergast?" committee men asked.

"About the best explanation I can give of him is that he is head of a political machine in Kansas City even better and stronger than Tammany in New York," replied the witness.

"Turned Down Cold."

H. L. Egan of St. Louis, president of the Union Electric Light and Power Company, "turned me down cold," Bradley remarked, in telling of a meeting with that executive.

"He said he had enough troubles he could look after in Missouri and would not be interested in Ohio politics," Bradley grinned.

Bradley said he and Davey went to New York to see utilities men and arrange contributions for Davey's campaign.

"But when we got there, they were alarmed because of a congressional inquiry and were doubtful of the policy of making direct political contributions. They thought it best to let each company decide for itself whether to contribute or to give the Davey company 'line trimming' contracts."

Bradley was still on the stand when the committee took a lunch-recess.

The probers still had not gone into an alleged "deal" for concrete pipe which Bradley said was to have netted him $50,000 in commissions.

The self-styled former "political contact man" for Gov. Martin L. Davey testified that contract was arranged with F. L. Kingensmith of Detroit after conversations between himself, Governor Davey and Democratic State Chairman Francis W. Poulsen.

He indicated, however, that the contract was not fulfilled after he had a disagreement with Poulsen.

Deadline Extended.
Thanks to an order of Common Pleas Judge John R. King, the committee had until 1 p. m. Wednesday to read into its record the voluminous "documents" and correspondence which Bradley said would show that Davey "deals" with industrial concerns for campaign contributions.

Judge King continued until that time a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus which took Bradley out of the custody of East Cleveland police. They came here Tuesday afternoon for a second time to seize him on a perjury warrant, filed by Governor Davey.

The governor, who has insisted he does not want Bradley taken away until the committee is through with him, did not have an attorney present to contest the continuance.

He predicted in an address at Cleveland last night that the investigation "soon will collapse of its own weight," adding that he would be present in court when Bradley is arraigned before Judge Stanton Addams of East Cleveland on the perjury charges.

More than 100 spectators and members of the committee were treated to a rollicking two and a half hours of entertainment last night by the testimony of Bruce H. Seabright, a Wheeling, W. Va., automobile dealer, whose correspondence with Bradley has been subjected to the committee's scrutiny.

Calls Him 'Mr. Davies.'

Seabright's story of relations with Bradley, his references to "Mr. Davies" (for Mr. Davey) and his frequent admonitions "now don't misunderstand me," frequently set off gales of laughter among the spectators and so amused committee members that they hardly could continue with their questioning.

Bradley had testified that Seabright was designated by General Motors to sell trucks to the Ohio state government as the result of a "political deal" but that NRA regulations prevented consummation of the alleged agreement.

The automobile dealer denied he made any campaign contributions or received any business from the state.

He testified that at Bradley's behest he asked General Motors to contribute to Davey's 1934 campaign, and the company replied with a flat "No."

"It is almost unbelievable that even the Hitler committee of the senate will drag in that scoundrel and let him besmirch the good name of the state of Ohio," Gov. Davey said.

"This is not a legal trial. This is not Russia... where they have a Stalin... and mock trials where they condemn men to death and bring them to the mock trials to confess... this is America."

T'll Put Bradley In Pen, Says Davey.

CLEVELAND—(UP)—Gov. Martin L. Davey said today he will devote his time for the next few weeks to putting Lee Bradley "in the penitentiary," and will oppose any attempt to delay the perjury trial of the star witness for the state senate graft investigating committee.

"I intend to stay in Cleveland for conferences on Bradley, Bradley, nothing but Bradley, all day," the governor said. "I will be present personally to prosecute him when my perjury warrant comes up for hearing in the East Cleveland court. I will not seek any delay and I will demand immediate trial."

Speaking at a Cuyahoga county Democratic rally last night, the governor said he would seek to "prove by the evidence that everything he testified to was a falsehood."

BOARD TO ASK 3-MILL LEVY APPROVAL AGAIN

Current School Assessment to Expire at End of Current Year.

With the three-mill levy for operation of Mansfield schools expiring at the end of 1938, the board of education last night instructed Clerk John H. Bristol to notify county, city and Madison township officials that the board will submit the levy to the voters in November.

Notification will be made now, Supt. W. L. Miller said, so that too many issues do not appear on the ballot at one time, reducing the chances for renewal of the levy.

"As the total return for school operation under the present set-up is 5.9 mills, of which the voted levy constitutes 3 mills, it is absolutely necessary that voters approve the levy if the schools continue to operate on a nine-month basis," Miller said.

Orders Survey Report.
On the recommendation of Miller, the board authorized Dr. T. C. Holy, who is conducting a school building survey in Mansfield, to order 500 mimeographed copies of the report and 100 maps of the city school district. A report on the survey will be submitted to the board by May 1.

The board last night adopted a new text for the typewriting classes at Senior high school. The text, entitled "Business and Personal Typewriting," replaces two or three out-of-date books, Miller said.

INCOME TAX IN NUTSHELL

NO. 20 Deduction For The Tax On Motor Gas.

If an automobile is used for both business and pleasure, all of the maintenance and operating expenses connected therewith, which constitute allowable deductions for federal income-tax purposes, should be allocated to the two uses on the basis of the time that it is used for each. For example, if the total expense of operation and maintenance, plus depreciation, for the taxable year amounted to $800, and the car was used three-fourths of the time for business and the balance of the time for pleasure, the allowable deduction for federal income-tax purposes would be $600.

If a law which imposes a tax on gasoline shows that the tax is imposed on the consumer and not on the dealer, the consumer may deduct as a tax, for federal income-tax purposes, the amount of the gasoline tax paid by him; but the taxpayer must have kept records of the payment of such taxes in order that the deduction may be substantiated as is required by the law and the regulations. The federal gasoline tax is not deductible by the consumer. A taxpayer may ascertain whether the gasoline tax is imposed by a State is deductible by the consumer or by the dealer by addressing an inquiry to the collector of internal revenue for his district.

In any case where the gasoline purchased is used for business purposes the tax may be added to the cost of the gasoline and deducted as a business expense; but where that is done, the gasoline tax cannot be deducted separately under the item of taxes.

ORE SUPPLY TO LAST 35 YEARS

Cost to Be Higher Later, U. S. Engineers Hear.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Thirty-five years is the limit of the present main iron ore supply of the United States as described to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers.

This supply is the reserves of the Lake Superior district, which furnishes 85 per cent of the country's present iron. After the Lake Superior supply is gone, it was predicted the country still would have iron, but at a higher cost.

BUST THAT COLD WIDE OPEN

Don't Merely Humor It!

Deal with a cold in earnest. Deal with it in seriousness. A cold is too fraught with danger to be taken lightly. Many a case of flu and pneumonia has started with nothing more than a "common cold." Treat a cold for what it is—an internal infection. Therefore, internal treatment. Treat a cold with a preparation made for colds and not a "cure-all." Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (LBQ) tablets are what you want. They are made expressly for the treatment of colds and not for all kinds of ailments. They are internal in effect and do four important things. First, they open the bowels. Second, they check the infection in the system. Third, they relieve the headache and fever. Fourth, they tone the system and help fortify against further attack. Bromo Quinine tablets are a proven preparation. They have been on the market over 40 years and are the world's largest-selling cold tablet. Bromo Quinine tablets come in 35c and 60c sizes. The 60c size is the better "buy." It gives you almost 20 per cent more for your money. When you feel a cold coming on—don't wait—don't procrastinate—go right to your druggist and get a package of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine (LBQ) tablets. Say "No" to substitutes!

Could it be that candid camera shots are intended to replace the comic valentines of earlier days?

When you look at pictures of some of the participants in Toronto's "stork derby" they confirm your suspicions.

The idea of getting out of debt by paying debts with borrowed money has been tried many times but has never worked.

Nazi Cloud Darkens Europe.

ADDED interest may be anticipated in the two remaining sessions of the Institute of International Understanding, being conducted in Mansfield on Monday evenings, as a result of recent occurrences in Europe, and the further disturbed conditions arising therefrom.

Hitler's seizure of control in Austria and his arrogant threat of intent to use force, if necessary, to recover colonies lost in the World War, coupled with the resignation of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden, of Great Britain, creates a situation that is rather baffling to those who do not avail themselves of all possible sources of accurate information.

While current happenings seem sufficiently far removed as to constitute no immediate peril to the United States, it cannot be overlooked that an even more remote incident was eventually effective in drawing this country into the World War.

The success of Hitler's Austrian coup becomes especially disquieting when considered in the light of its probable inspiration to further efforts to extend Nazi dictatorship in Europe and to demand quick return of Germany's prewar colonies.

One after another, the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles are being destroyed. Hitler's statement: "Germans do not desire war, but they do not fear war," gives little encouragement to those who stop to consider that his every recent move has been along lines that tend to invite hostilities.

The Slaughtered Forty Thousand.

MANSFIELD is a city of about forty thousand population. It takes the entire population of one such city—men, women and children—each year, to supply the victims for automobile fatalities.

In addition, several hundred thousand more are crippled or otherwise injured in traffic accidents—a great majority of which are caused by somebody's carelessness.

If forty thousand persons were herded together and killed on a given day the world would be horrified. It is the mere fact that auto catastrophes are extended over the entire year and occur all over the country that causes them to be regarded so lightly.

While there has been a stirring of public conscience on the subject of traffic tragedies, there has not yet been general recognition of criminal negligence in permitting a continuance of the careless, reckless, incompetent and drunken driving that has been going on.

Education, law enforcement and revocation of licenses of unfit drivers are the three factors that offer greatest hope for improved conditions. An aroused public sentiment, growing out of more widespread realization of the causes of highway casualties, is an urgent present need.

Cementing a Friendship.

THERE is talk in Washington again about a possible resumption of payments on foreign debts to our government. Administration heads are said to have been considering especially "renewed payments" on a lower scale by one unidentified debtor, presumably Great Britain.

This would be good psychology and good business for both countries, at a time when there is so much talk of friendly co-operation between the two great English-speaking nations in economic and naval policy.

Any alliance, of course, is undesirable and impossible; the United States cannot make alliances with anybody, nor tie its hands with foreign pledges. But there can be a tacit understanding between statesmen and private citizens of the two countries that, in the pre-ent menacing state of the world, the American people and the people of the British Empire, who have the same culture and largely the same ancestry, wish each other well and will at least try to do each other no harm.

We could make good use of any possible payments on our foreign accounts just now, and in the case of Great Britain they might serve as cement for a friendship useful on both sides.

More and Faster War Planes.

AN INTERESTING bit of flying was done in England the other night when a young Air Force squadron leader flew 327 miles in forty-eight minutes, an average of 408.75 miles an hour. It was blind flying, too. He did not see anything outside of the cockpit until he started to land. He navigated his craft from a panel of instruments, including an altimeter, an artificial horizon, direction gyroscope, a rate-of-climb indicator and a rate-of-turn indicator. He landed at the Northolt air field west of London aided only by one landing light and a luminous wind-direction indicator.

The flight is said to be the swiftest ever made by a land plane and probably the swiftest ever made by any plane at night.

Details of construction and equipment are closely guarded secrets, because these planes are intended for use against the enemy in that war the world feels it so much easier to prepare for than prevent.

When the Bell Rings.

NOT the least charming thing about Katharine Cornell, the actress, is her attitude toward age. Asked if she is 40 years old, she replies:

"Of course I'm 40. I was 39 last year at this time, wasn't I? And now I'm 40. It's perfectly natural."

"Time touches you, doesn't it? The first thing you know, it rings a bell, and there you are—40—and so what? I'm not at all conscious of my age."

Blessed is anybody who isn't conscious of his age.

Patriotic Spirit of George Washington Won Battle With Politics and Criticism

First President Was Not "Beloved Leader of Happy Army," But His Zeal Finally Triumphed Over His Detractors.

By WALTER SEIFERT

PERSISTENT political de-bunking, uprooting Pollyanna from the pages of history to substitute findings more dour and realistic, have discovered that George Washington was not the serene, beloved leader of a happy army.

Furthermore, it is revealed, the illustrious first president whose 26th birthday is celebrated today, was not even tempered, not "as calmly passionless as a Greek God," and was not applauded and beloved throughout the young nation he led.

Facts about Washington lie somewhere between the pictures drawn by the romanticists and realists of research. Certainly he suffered criticism, treachery, treason and gross ingratitude in his own time.

Did Not Seek Command. General Washington did not seek the supreme command of the Continental army. Famous at 26 for valorous service in the French and Indian wars, Washington settled down to a gentleman planter's life at Mount Vernon where his active mind found exercise in management of the estate, bounds and hunting, cards and dancing and intimate contact with nature.

But when he was called to lead the Revolutionary army, Washington entered a life of military routines, bitter political wrangles and continuous physical exhaustion which pursued him almost to the grave.

After one despairing letter to Martha Custis, his charming wife, he set himself wholeheartedly to the task of making the nation free and independent, pledging his life and fortune to the cause.

From the moment he reached Boston in July, 1775, Washington was beset with political storms, Congress, fearful that "military power might overbalance the civil," permitted enlistments of only four months, making demobilization of the troops a continuous process.

Lacking money, food, clothes and rifles, Washington and his raw militia sat helpless under the guns of Gage and Howe for eight long months, while Congress screamed for action.

Faced Manifold Problems. Later, after Gallant Henry Knox brought ample supplies, the leader had to face the problem of unruly, ambitious assistants and the constant desertion of half-trained soldiers.

Sadness set his face into the iron lines his portraits show during the winter at Valley Forge.

In September of 1778, Washington wept to see Benedict Arnold, whom he had respected, sell his honor for $50,000 and a commission in the British service.

Two years after peace was won, in 1781, Washington was forced to face an uprising among his troops, who threatened the new independent nation.

Pacified Angry Veterans. As he stood before the sullen gathering of those who were dear as brothers, his eyes filled with tears. The head that he bared was no longer hazel, but white as snow, and it was with shaking hands that he fumbled for his steel-rimmed glasses.

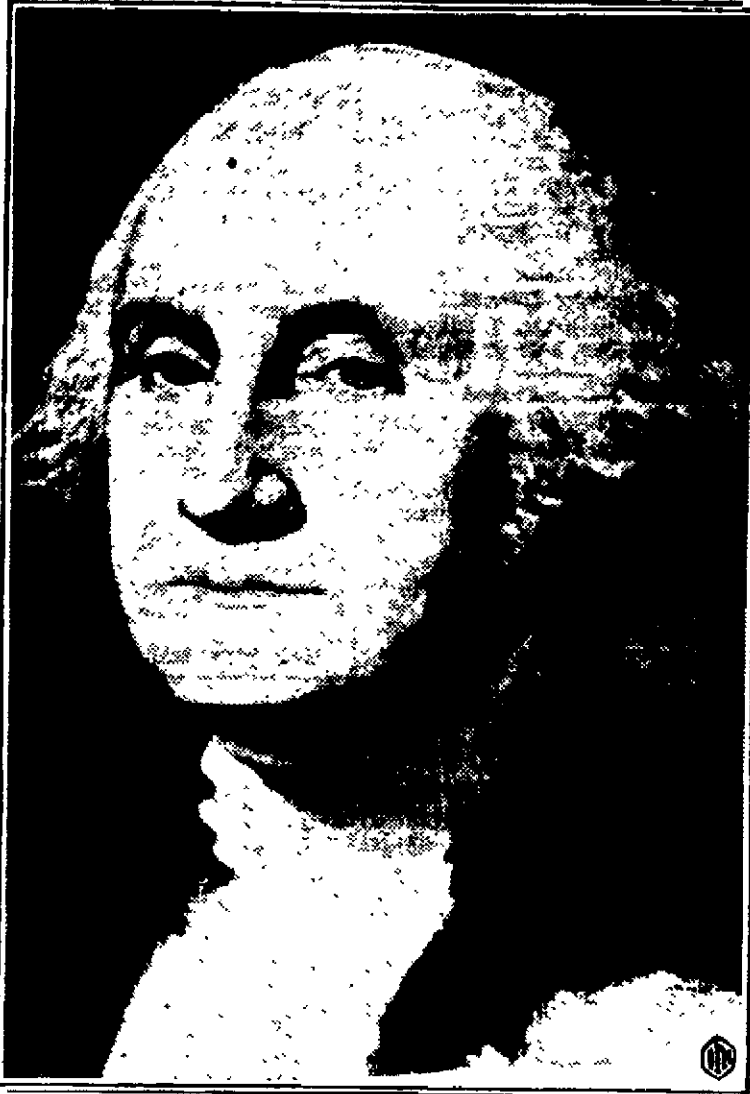

"You see," he said apologetically, "I have grown not only gray but blind in your service."

The years that followed were no less filled with criticism than the war period, but Washington moved toward his objectives in a majestic, indomitable manner.

Fought for Strong Union. Denounced as an "enemy" to the liberties of a free people because he fought stubbornly for a constitution which would provide a central government of strength and recognized authority, Washington remained unswerving.

Finally, after being drafted to serve a second term as president, he waived a third term, which he could have had for the asking. Pitifully eager for personal peace, he went home to Mount Vernon.

There, the old ardors dimmed by the years, he lived in the quiet of fields and forest until the end.

Conflicting Views On Prices Prove Confusing

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON—Not more than two or three months ago President Roosevelt gave it out at one of his press conferences that prices were too high.

Thereupon, he said, to be quite a general reduction, to enable folk to do more buying, thus stimulating business.

He added, however, that wages should not be cut, or price reductions would not be stimulated. That was clear enough reasoning.

The point which business leaders was that few industries are making sufficient profits to cut prices, except at the expense of waste cuts, without going bankrupt.

BUSINESS PERTURBED. I am not convinced of business' absolute truthfulness. I suspect that sometimes its profits are larger than it cares to own up to. Nevertheless, such was its argument, and it was considerably perturbed by the presidential suggestion. It was additionally confused, due to the fact that the administration's previous policy had favored price boosts. Higher prices were the object of dollar devaluation and gold sterilization.

And an advance DID follow. Well, assume that it owed itself, and that the president decided there ought to be a reduction again.

NOW—PRICES TOO LOW! There might be some logic in this line of argument. But the other day "F.D." had another press conference in the course of which he alleged that prices are too low, they should be re-boostered. And gold's partial de-sterilization is resorted to, as a move in this direction.

The administration clarified this seeming contradiction by saying that SOME prices are too low, some too high.

In his most recent statement, the president said the administration's economic policies were being directed toward a balancing of various commodity prices so that national income could be restored.

I am not a businessman, but I were one I'll bet I'd be confused by these various statements.

UNCERTAINTY WORRIES. During the recent little business conference in Washington, I was talking with a group of these peevish folk out in the sticks (and some of them were businessmen whose interests run up into the small millions).

One of them complained bitterly of the current administration's eccentricities, as he termed them.

"Yeah," quoth the second one, "but next time we may have John L. Lewis as president. How'll you like that?"

"I'm anti-John L. Lewis," responded No. 1, "but I know where he stands, anyway. If he were president I could shape my program four years ahead, with plenty of certainty. I wouldn't like it, but I'd know what to count on. How can I gamble on anything, with the whole prospect changing month by month, if not week by week, or day by day?"

TWO GROUPS' CLASH. Said a third: "We have two sets of prices. '1. The big utilities, whose prices are fixed by the government, federal or local—like interstate transportation, power, street cars, gas and the like. '2. Our little, more or less small-town businesses—retail. 'When we try for price and wage readjustments these big, regulated industries and our little, competitive business' interests clash."

Big business is formidable, but little business, collectively, is formidable also. What it needs is organization. And little business is democratic. Every workman can become a small businessman—and a big businessman later, maybe.

CAN YOU think straight, without fear or fizzle, on this war question? Then here's something to chew on. It's from a 29-year-old Young American, "one of those who'll have to do the fighting if it comes." And, in case you doubt his patriotism, he has "spent seven years in the National Guard so I may defend his country if it is ever invaded." But when it comes to looking for a War—"NIX!" says H. C.

"WHY SHOULD THE U. S. A. GO TO WAR? We are not completely over the map yet. Europe has not paid us the money they borrowed for it yet. Thousands of our boys were killed and can never come back—and thousands more were irreparably injured, who by today in hospitals, unable to see or move or think like sane and normal men.

"We have no reason for another war. We do not need more territory, because there is plenty of unoccupied land in our own country. We do not need to seek new supplies of natural resources. We have sufficient resources, natural and man-made, to last us for years to come. If we don't need more territory or new natural resources, what shall we go to war about?"

"Someone may say, 'What about the American capital invested in China?' Why should American investors in foreign lands expect the government to protect them? When Americans went into China they knew that things were unsettled and they still are today. They were willing to take that risk and gamble on success. So, when they lose, why should they expect us to send our army and navy to save and protect their investments?"

"When this new war between China and Japan started, Americans were told to leave. Those who choose to stay should take the chances. "Yes, we have soldiers, sailors and marines over there, but why? They are there to protect American lives and property because the Chinese government cannot do the job. But, after the first crisis passed, we should have brought our fighting forces home before more of them were killed. We have already lost one gunboat and several men. Bring them home before more of them are murdered by mistake!"

"LET US STAY HERE IN OUR OWN BACK YARD AND KEEP OUR SOLDIERS, SAILORS AND MARINES TO DEFEND OUR OWN COUNTRY."

"THE OLD DUTCH AND ENGLISH TRADING COMPANIES USED TO FIGHT THEIR BATTLES AND PROTECT THEIR PROPERTY. THEY DID NOT EXPECT THEIR RESPECTIVE GOVERNMENTS TO DO THIS FOR THEM."

"If we stay here and any foreign power wants to fight us, let them come over here. We can fight them to defend our own country. That would be an 'honorable war.' But these quixotic expeditions are INSANE."

Ralph H. Clark—age 29, Box 173, Mantua, N. J.

That's talking! That's a real demonstration of the old spunk and sense which won America her place in the sun. Heaven knows, I feel, as keenly as any, the tragic plight of those innocent ones who are caught in the deadly trap of foreign influences, wherever they may be, in China, or Spain, Russia or Italy.

BUT OUR FIRST DUTY, BEFORE GOD AND MAN, IS TO OUR OWN INNOCENT ONES, AND NO HONEST MAN CAN DENY THAT WE HAVE MORE SUFFERING RIGHT NOW, HERE AT HOME, THAN WE CAN MANAGE LET US SEND OUR OWN MISERY FIRST.

And as for those wealthy citizens who would risk American lives and involve America's honor, in order to protect their investment, I've a strong hunch that they are as traitorous as any spy who would sell his country for private profit.

However, that's just one woman's notion. Perhaps yours is different. Let's hear! (Copyright, 1938)

Keeping Step

Should Britain Treat With Nazis?

—By LESLIE EICHEL

THERE ARE arguments among Britishers as to whether Britain should enter into "peace" treaties with the totalitarian states, such as Italy and Germany. That means, Britain already has gone far toward entering such treaties. No nation permits knowledge of treaty negotiations unless they have gone a long way.

The British cabinet is supposed to have indicated to Hitler that Germany could expect a restoration of at least a portion of the colonial possessions lost during the World War.

"Bitter enders" believe that compromise with the totalitarian countries would be "surrender" by the democratic nations.

Undoubtedly the dictators would feel a bit put down also. Mussolini has had misadventure in Spain with France, and Germany has demanded more than it will receive.

Suppose there would be no treaties—and no "peace"? Would democracy get any further? How much longer before the backs of all would break with the economic burden imposed by armaments? How long before, in despair, maddened peoples would begin fighting as "a last resort?"

THROWN TO THE WOLVES. Said Sir Stafford Cripps, some time ago, "The present (British) National government is throwing the democratic babies of Europe to the wolves in the hope that the imperial babies (dominions) may be saved for another five years. By such a policy we are helping to create a German power that will make it easy to pick the bones of the British Empire in six years' time."

But more recent events in Germany indicate that the German people, themselves, may return to democracy in six years' time.

Perhaps it is with peace, not with war, that the dictators will fall. Absolutism does not stand well the daily drippings of peace.

The British have not suddenly become fools, after centuries of playing one European nation against another to maintain a balance of power. One may test assured that Britain WILL enter an agreement either with Germany or Italy—and that about politics and ideology and form of government later. In fact, the present British government does not give a whoop what form of government any other nation has, so long as that government does not interfere with Britain's trade lines throughout the world.

(Britain's non-interference in the recent Nazi absorption of Austria is a point in question.)

And France will have to follow Britain. France, unlucky lady, has mortgaged her soul to the British banker.

MONEY. Virtually every major country in the world is short of money except Great Britain, Holland and the United States. (We may be having a recession, but we have billions in gold and resources.)

Nor is the Soviet Union "broke." Indeed, it has tremendous resources—but it still has not organized itself so as to gain the advantage of its wealth. It has nothing to lend, it even suffers shortages in that which it should have plenty.

Thus, in the final showdown, Great Britain, the United States and Holland hold the cards. And, like good card players, the longer they wait, the sooner the bluff will be called.

That is the view of hardened diplomats. The Americans are least likely to be misled by mistake.

Suppose you are asked how you're feeling. Do you say (a) "Fine!" or (b) do you take a deep breath and tell them just how you are feeling, all about your operation, and every symptom you have—and cure your acquaintance of ever asking that question of you again?

On the subject of children . . . Do you (a) like all of them or (b) are you bored by most of them or (c) don't you believe children are any better than adults?

If someone starts to tell you a story and asks you to stop him if you've already heard it (a) do you stop him or (b) haven't you any courage either?

When friends are visiting you and announce at 10:45 p. m. that they must be going do you (a) insist on them staying a little longer or (b) do you admit that they are adults who know their own minds—and let them go home?

Do you express your opinions on modern art, modern literature, modern architecture, modern music and economics, or do you admit that you don't really know enough about such things to have an opinion worth repeating?

Each season may bring its disadvantages, but also, it brings its joys. And this is the season when new maple syrup is put on the market.

Maple syrup is good all the year, and, as has been said of a certain commodity on the market, it is good to the last drop. Its chief use, perhaps, is to spread atop pancakes, but it tastes rather heavenly with baking powder biscuits, too, and its uses are many.

In former years the production was individual, and was largely based on the particular needs of the sugar camp owner, with, perhaps, a few caddies traded in at the store or sold to those nearby who did not have sugar trees.

Nowadays, however, especially in such localities as Geauga county, the latest processes and improvements are in use, and the production and sale of syrup and sugar has been put on a commercial basis.

February and March produce a weather that is not entirely to our liking, but it must be borne in mind that they also produce maple syrup, and that goes in large measure to pay us back for the climatic capers they cut—Ohio State Journal.

Without Doubt. We don't know what was the wisest bequest ever made but we have a strong notion that the Ontario baby prize was the most foolish—Kansas City Star.

McIntyre's New York Glimpses

—By O. O. MCINTYRE

THESE are drab days for the shake-down weathers. Or as the late Nathan Burkan elegantly labeled them, "Hours of the blat."

In the unbowed days there is a record of one Caliph paying a

Charmers $100,000 hush money yearly over a ten year period.

Almost any jovial convention delegate on a major tour is a good for a couple to head off the exposure to the little woman back yonder. Flats were maintained to keep innocents to tea, compromise them and then whack-up with some consciousness shyster who had the papers all ready to sign.

The real k.o. came when the anti-breach of promise law was passed. Prior to this, millions were coughed up annually by those who shrank from the smear of headlines. Rasputin no called themselves lawyers indulged every trick to terrorize victims of minor indiscretions.

Today a vigorous prosecuting attorney, in contrast to former official diffidence that smelt to heaven, has a sympathetic ear for those who become targets for the most despicable of all human creatures—the woman blackmailer. A number of them are already heading for prison.

The Roy Howards' daughter Jane has been caught up in the romantic excitement of the print shops and has turned to journalism with the enthusiasm of an entire female polyanthus.

Her mother had her instincts naturally. Her father became one of the foremost publicists, and her aunt Alice Ross, an expert writer for the press and magazines. Miss Howard is now attached to the Honolulu Advertiser, and on the side turns in a Waikiki Beat personality column that has attained wide following.

The rush, go and distance hazards create strange relationships and acquaintances in the metropolis. Faith Baldwin, the novelist, and Myra Kingley, the astrologist, for instance, are long established friends who never met.

They were born on the same day of the month, correspond regularly and swap Christmas gifts. Several times they made arrangements to meet, but something came up and so they let it go.

For a number of years Russ Cole, the cartoonist, and I have swapped epistolary observations. But have not yet got together. The same, incidentally, is true of Faith Baldwin and this scribbler.

Indeed, New Yorker frequently sees a friend from San Francisco more often than a friend in metro-polis. It has been more than six years since, save for a mutual hand wave at the annual Dutch Treat dinner, I have seen H. T. Webster. Our friendship roots back to middle west days and we were billeted together during our first quest in the city. We exchange frequent letters, inquiries, insults and telephone calls, but that all, and in cases of thousands of other cliff dwellers, the delinquents put no strain on friendship. Just the other day I learned a man I knew well for 15 years was living in the apartment building adjoining mine and had not seen me for years. Not once during my occupancy have I seen him.

John Barrymore and his wife, Elaine Barry, received little more than a collective yawn upon their recent visit here. Celebrity chasers, generally speaking, gave them the frozen stare and a "So what?" Barrymore, for years was regarded by the curious the moment he stepped from his hotel or theater. His autograph was once the most desired of all. The indifference may mean nothing or a lot. New York generally speaks in this way, to the great befuddlement of stars.

Maurice Chevalier found himself suddenly a dead pigeon shortly before he returned to France. The star that has turned the town topsy-turvy recently is Sonia Henie. When she appeared the snooters could be depended upon to put on a show.

My jousts with autograph seekers have been casual and scatter. Once a group of Emporia, Kans., school girls invaded our room on a coast train. Word got around Ned Sparks was aboard. But now and then a request for a picture or a scous of having seen a picture in newspapers and magazines, but not a concern of the identity. I try not to notice and bear up bravely when they glance at the signature and look so disappointed. But, after all, they asked for it, for goodness sake.

SENT TO PRISON

Jersey Woman Sentenced In Yule Slaying of Baby.

SOMERVILLE, N. J. — (AP) — Mrs. Sophie Arcuri, 24, has been sentenced to an indeterminate term in the Clinton State reformatory for women after Judge Ralph J. Smalley accepted a plea of no defense to a charge she murdered a 5-month-old Celestina Bortolon, Dec. 27 and left the body under a Christmas tree.

Her attorneys presented medical testimony that she suffered from delusional that her own 3-month-old child would be "a new savior."

Prosecutor Clarkson A. Cramer presented statements by four other physicians that Mrs. Arcuri was "legally sane."

The police quoted Mrs. Arcuri at the time of her arrest as saying she cut the baby's throat with a paring knife.

CHAPTER XXXV.

He drew in his feet, leaned over and stared down at the toes of his shoes, wagging his yellow curls despondently.

"Hope you won't forget, Annie, that I said I was fond of you," he offered presently. "And I guess I'd better be toddling along. Do you mind if I use your phone on my way out?"

"No, of course not." If only he would go—leave her alone. Let her think.

The telephone was in the outer hall. Caradad, huddled down in her chair, had difficulty in repressing a slight cry when she heard her name spoken sharply: "Annie!"

"Yes . . ."

"I'll take the rap for this one. I just called up—the maid says she's out of town for a few days. Good-bye."

Terry Cantine was ushered into the drawing room where several callers were chatting with Caradad. He was smiling and as debonair as ever as he strolled forward to greet her. He gave her a little pat on the arm, then spoke to others with his usual careless ease.

He explained that he had reached home about two hours ago and had been getting himself "settled" up after a tiresome train trip. He had had an enjoyable time but was glad to be at home again. Yes, thanks, he wouldn't mind joining the others in a cold drink.

Caradad listened to him in something of a daze. She had been in the grasp of a wretched dream for the last 48 hours. It must be a dream, if it all were true. Terry could not pose in this self-possessed fashion, meeting her eyes so frankly, sending her a little smile when he thought no one was watching. It couldn't be true.

At last, she and Terry were alone. With a comparison of the surprised herself, she suggested that they go out and sit in the garden. Her hands were icy. There was that queer cold feeling about her heart, too. A little later, it gave way to warmth—a little glow of growing resentment.

Terry was recounting his trip with elaborate detail. Worth had a very nice place. He had done some little playing, but lack of practice had told on his game. Badly off form. Polo was a game one had to stay with. Oh, yes. He believed that the Cad made pretty fair progress with Worth. He cultivated him as much as he dared in the matter of business—worth the trip, anyway.

Caradad gathered herself for the supreme effort.

"Terry."

"Yes? What is it, Dad?" He met her level gaze unflinchingly.

"Isn't—there something else you want to tell me?"

"Something else? What do you mean?"

"About . . . St. Louis." It was out, now.

Terry stared at her without a change of expression, as if he were trying to read what lay in her brown eyes. The gray pair failed, shifted, looked away. Terry took a cigarette from his case and lighted it. There was no tremor in the brown hands. And, for some reason, she was glad. Terry stared at the lake through his half-closed eyes.

"You know, then," he said quietly.

"Yes."

"I can't think how—but it doesn't matter. Not now."

"No. I guess nothing matters."

"Is there anything you'd like to have me tell you, Dad?"

She shook her head wearily.

"Perhaps there's something you'd like to tell me . . . before. I can take it."

"What's the use?" Caradad asked in a flat little voice. "I just guess that you'd be different. I guess you never will be . . . now. I've learned that everybody has to pay for things, some way. You won't believe it. You don't ever think of it."

"Paying the piper," he mused. "Perhaps you're right—but you're wrong, too. I've no defense. There's only one thing I want to get into the record before I go."

Caradad made no reply.

"It's this, Dad. I said everything would be different when I came back. I meant it. It would have been a woman like you couldn't understand. It was the end, but I had to . . ."

"Oh, please!"

Caradad sprang from her seat.

She leaned against the balustrade, her hands clasped tightly behind her. Her brown eyes were bright with anger as Terry rose slowly and stood looking down at her white upturned face.

"What, Dad?"

"I think I could have stood . . . anything but that. Please go away. I'd rather you didn't come back . . . ever."

"Of course. Good-bye, Dad."

"Good-bye, Terry."

Wilberforce was genuinely perturbed. When dinner was served Miss Vardell declined to eat. She sat alone, huddled in one corner of the swing seat staring into space. She had been there for several hours—ever since Mr. Terry left, so far as Wilberforce knew.

He had asked Miss Vardell if she

It's Odd
But It's Science.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Instead of shearing sheep, Russian scientists give them a dose of medicine that makes them moult.

The Russians do not think this discovery will take the place of shearing. But they predict a cunning way to outwit nature.

This concerns the sheep with

"I SEE YOU'VE BEEN HITTING THAT THALLIUM AGAIN!"

"mixed" wools. These have coarse and fine hairs mixed. The mixed wool varieties are not rated high. The new wool medicine, thallium, will select the hairs wanted. It will make the fine hairs moult, while the coarse stick to the sheep. After the fine hair is out, the sheep still has the coarse stuff as a fairly valuable by-product.

The selection is due to a difference in roots of sheep's wool. Thallium weakens the roots so that hair falls out. But it takes less thallium to weaken a fine hair root than a coarse one.

The discovery is reported in Nature by N. A. Ulin, of the Wool Laboratory, Moscow. There is a drawback. Thallium sometimes makes the sheep sick.

Thallium has been tried in the United States for making hair grow on partly bald heads. Its value is supposed to lie in its control over the nerves which monitor hair roots.

CALGARY, Alta.—(AP)—A 30-year-old horse owned by O. B. Webster is cutting a third set of teeth and still "going strong." Webster has driven the horse to church twice a week for the last few years and attributes the animal's longevity to "right living."

Southern Fashions Dictate Northern Fashions

It has long been an accepted fact that southern wear prognosticates what we northerners will wear when the mercury soars. The two models above show what is being worn in some of the smartest resorts this season. The bathing beauty is showing a wine red flowered suit made of a wool material along the flatter and popular dressmaker lines. Notice that the suit itself is untripped and gets all its smartness from line and cut. The large hat and glasses protect the sun worshiper from too much exposure. The swagger coat is destined to remain the favorite for another season if we can judge from this loosely cut white coat chosen for a topper to a walking costume. Notice the wide shouldered sleeves and the way the coat buttons close to the throat.
